TIMBER WOLF RECOVERY

Tuesday, April 6, 1:00 pm

Larry and Emily Schuenemann's interest in the wolf recovery in Wisconsin began with Emily's teaching at Marshall Middle School where students went to Trees for Tomorrow in Eagle River. The study of the wolf was a subject taught with many principles of ecology and provided a way for students to become actively involved in their recovery. They have traveled to both Yellowstone & Isle Royale National Parks and the Northwest Territories of Canada to study wolves. As a skilled photographer, Larry has documented their travels and will share some of his photos of wolves in the wild. Besides the experiences from these trips the couple will draw from their involvement with the DNR carnivore tracking program. Emily is a regional coordinator for tracking blocks in central Wisconsin. In the summer they also participate in howling surveys. The program will focus on monitoring the wolf population and some of the current problems and challenges in managing the wolf population in Wisconsin. Register by Monday April 1

She develops a method of video conferencing that will allow termination without ever leaving the office.
